GEORGE WASHINGTON,

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS a Treaty of friendſhip, limits, and navigation, between the United States of America and his Catholic Majeſty, was concluded and ſigned at St. Lorenzo el Real on the twenty-ſeventh day of October one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety five, by the Plenipotentiaries of the United States and of his Catholic Majeſty, duly and reſpectively authorized for that purpoſe; which treaty, is in the words following:

[For the Treaty ſee Newport Mercury of April 12.]

AND WHEREAS the ſaid Treaty has by me, by and with the advice and conſent of the Senate of the United States, on the one part, and by his Catholic Majeſty on the other, been duly approved and ratified; and the ratifications were duly exchanged at Aranjuez on the twenty-fifth day of April, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-ſix: Now, therefore, to the end that the ſaid Treaty may be executed and obſerved with punctuality and the moſt ſincere regard to good faith on the part of the United States, I hereby make known the premiſes; and enjoin and require all perſons bearing office civil or military, within the United States, and all others, citizens or inhabitants thereof, or being within the ſame, to execute and obſerve the ſaid treaty accordingly.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have cauſed the Seal L. S. of the United States of America to be fixed to theſe Preſents, and ſigned the ſame with my hand.

DONE, at the city of Philadelphia, the ſecond day of Auguſt, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-ſix, and of the Independence of the United States of America the twenty-firſt.

[Signed] GEO. WASHINGTON.

By the Preſident,

TIMOTHY PICKERING,

Secretary of State.

MENTZ, May 31.

THE following general orders have been publiſhed to the Imperial army:

"The unreaſonable demands of the inſolent government of France having diſperſed all hopes for peace at preſent, and a new campaign becoming neceſſary, the armiſtice has been declared at an end by his Imperial Majeſty, and hoſtilities will recommence on the 31ſt inſt. between the hours of eleven and twelve in the forenoon.—His Majeſty having been pleaſed to confer on me the command of the army, at this critical period I feel it my duty to exert all my powers; and I wiſh and hope, that all the troops under my command, on whoſe bravery depends the happineſs of our native land, and the obtaining of honorable peace, may be animated by ſimilar zeal and patriotic ſentiments, and that they may vigorouſly and indefatigably co-operate to gain this important object to which I hereby ſolemnly call upon them. Reciprocal confidence of the troops in their commander, and of the commander in his troops, is the only means to favour the execution of this grand deſign, and to facilitate the fulfilling of duties ſo noble. This I beg from the army, which I have the honour to command, and I think I deſerve it by my ſincere attachment to them. I am proud of being at the head of one of the braveſt and beſt armies that ever appeared in the field, and which has in this war already given ſo many proofs of courage, bravery, and fidelity.—Without partiality for the troops of his Majeſty's hereditary dominions, I ſhall value the merit of any individual, and feel alike at any loſs whatever. Our ſituation, our views, and our advantages, are ſo cloſely connected, that all have a right to expect in the ſame degrees my regard for them. We muſt all be animated by the ſame ſpirit, which is founded on reciprocal eſteem, and confidence originating from experience. The Generals I hope will endeavour to heighten, in the troops under their command, the compliance to their duty, by ſtrong ſentiments of patriotiſm, and by a noble impulſe for honour and glory—to guard them againſt that enthuſiaſm of the preſent time, which ſerves to ſeduce the public opinion, and to diſſolve the bonds of ſociety; they will not ſuffer ſingle members to undermine the ſinnews of the whole body by miſguarded words, premature reproach, and political quarrels; they will maintain in the principal part of the German nation a firm perſuaſion and a warm ſenſe of the juſtice of our cauſe; and they will eſtabliſh in the private ſoldier confidence in his commander and in himſelf. It is folly to deſpiſe an enemy, at leaſt in regard to his ſtrength and valour; but it is alſo the higheſt degree of puſillanimity to value him more than one's ſelf, and to aſcribe to him a ſuperiority of which that enemy has given no proofs whatever—We fight for every thing that is dear to us, Religion, Government, Property, real Political Liberty, order, and laws, againſt the attack of a nation, which tramples on all the bonds of ſociety, deſtroys all property and which attempts, without faith, without religion and conſcience, to ruin the human race. We fight for the rights of civilized nations: Germany has confided to us the care of her welfare and preſervation; we muſt fulfil her expectations—we can, we will do it. The Field Marſhall takes this opportunity to acquaint the troops under his command with his ſentiments, and to aſſure them of the full confidence he places in the known abilities of their commanders, and in their own valour."

Field Marſhall"

NEGOTIATIONS are on the tapis for an alliance, offenſive and defenſive with the French Republic.—Five hundred tri-coloured flags are ordered to be made, to ſuperſede the white flags worn by Spaniſh ſhips. Our army and navy are equipping with rapidity; and the army round Gibraltar are 49 000 men ſtrong.

PARIS, June 5

Letters from Germany ſtate, that Field Marſhal Count de Lacey, prime Miniſter to the Emperor, had been arreſted on a charge of high treaſon.

Buonaparte, is only 27 years old.—Gen. Wurmſer, who commands the Auſtrian army of the Palatinate is above 80.

June 6.

Letters from Pavia of the 18 h ult. inform that the ſtudents of that celebrated Univerſity have declared themſelves decidedly in favour of the Revolution; they have requeſted to take up arms, in order to fight with their French friends againſt the common enemy, the ariſtocrats and deſpots. Buonaparte has granted an audience to the ambaſſadors of the Pope; they were about throwing themſelves at the Conqueror's feet; but he prevented it, and requeſted them to take a ſeat. After a long pauſe, the Apoſtolical meſſengers began to expatiate on the extreme admiration the Holy Father felt for the illuſtrious virtues of the General; they praiſed his moderation and humanity, to conquered nations, and concluded by ſoliciting peace. Buonaparte replied, that they muſt apply to the Executive Directory; that, nevertheleſs, they, as well as the Prince who had ſent them, might rely on his benevolence and on the protection of the French army; that for the preſent, he demanded no more than a ſubſidy of Fifteen Millions, and a collection of the beſt paintings and fineſt ſtatues, which were but trifles in a country abounding with wonders, and the reſidence of Saints.

Buonaparte converſed in Italian with the Ambaſſadors—they were quite charmed with his politeneſs, and withdrew well ſatisfied with his propoſals.

OFFICIAL DETAILS—ARMY of ITALY.

Buonaparte, commander in chief of the army of Italy, to the Executive Directory.

"Head quarters, Verona, 25 Prairial, June 3.

"Citizens Directors, I ſhall quit this city to morrow morning; it is very large and beautiful—I ſhall leave a garriſon here, to keep myſelf maſter of three bridges over the Adige.

"I have not concealed from the inhabitants, that if the King of France had not quitted their city prior to my paſſage acroſs the Po, I ſhould have ſet fire to a city audacious enough to fancy itſelf the capital of the French empire.

"I have juſt viſited the Amphitheatre; this remain of the Roman nation is worthy of thoſe by whom it was built. I could not prevent feeling myſelf humbled at the pitifulneſs of our field of Mars; here an hundred thouſand ſpectators may be ſeated, and hear with eaſe the orator who ſhould addreſs them.

"The emigrants are flying from Italy; more than 2500 ſet out five days before our arrival. They are conveying into Germany their remorſes and their miſery.

(Signed) BUONAPARTE."

The General in Chief of the army in Italy, to the Executive Directory.

"Head quarters, Milan, 20 Prairial, June 8.

"Citizens Directors,

"After the battle of Borghetto, the paſſage of the Mincio, the taking of Peſchiera, and the flight of the enemy into the Tyroleſe, we inveſted the town of Milan.

"General Augereau ſet out at break of day for Caſtianne. After having paſſed the Mincio beyond the lakes, he proceeded to the Fauxbourg of Cheriale. He forced the entrenchments, took the tower, and obliged the enemy to retire quite within the fortreſs of Mantua.

"A drummer twelve years of age, whoſe name I ſhall ſend you, has particularly diſtinguiſhed himſelf. He climbed, during the fire, to the top of the tower, to open the gate.

"I ought not to paſs over a circumſtance which exhibits the barbariſm which ſtill reigns in theſe countries. At St. Georgio there is a religious. They have fled, for the place was expoſed to the fire of the cannon. Some of our ſoldiers entered to poſt themſelves in it. They heard cries, they ran to the low court, and forced the door of a wretched cell, where they found a young woman, ſeated on a miſerable chair, and her hands fettered. This unfortunate being begged her life. They broke her irons. She appeared to be about twenty-two years of age. She had been confined four years in this ſituation, for having endeavoured to eſcape and to obey, in the age and the country of love, the impulſe of her heart. She ſhewed much intereſt for the French. She was beautiful, and joined to the vivacity of the climate the melancholy of misfortune. Whenever any one entered ſhe appeared uneaſy, becauſe ſhe dreaded the return of her tyrant. She begged the liberty of breathing the free air. They anſwered to her that the grape ſhot poured around the caſtle. Am I ſaid ſhe, to remain here, is to die?"

Extract of a letter from Munich, June 6.

An extraordinary courier is juſt arrived here from Inſpruck, with deſpatches for Gen. Wurmſer, which gives the following news, and which has created much alarm.

On the 3d inſt. the vanguard of the French army was before the town of Trente, from whence the Prince Biſhop and the principal inhabitants immediately took their flight. The ſame alarm is ſpread to the towns of Botzen and Brixen.

Letters from Trieſte ſay, that the principal merchants of that place had packed up their moſt precious effects and were traveling with them to Vienna. A report was in circulation that the French intended to make a landing on the coaſt of the Adriatic ſea, to deſtroy at once all the commerce of that city which was become extremely flouriſhing at the expence of Venice, ſince the houſe of Auſtria reſolved to extend its maritime commerce to that port.

The reſult of the news is, that the French army which has treated with nearly all the ſtates of Italy, and which dictated conditions of peace that none of them had power to refuſe, is about to direct all its operations againſt the hereditary eſtates of the houſe of Auſtria, and that a route is to be opened into Iſtria and Tirol.

In the conſternation cauſed by general terror, we know nothing poſitively of the army of Beaulieu; it is ſaid that he is encamped at Campera, where he expects the tardy reinforcements which he was promiſed from Vienna.

Letters inform us here, that the Empreſs of Ruſſia has guaranteed Gallicia to the Houſe of Auſtria; and that General Baraincourt, who commands an army there, has been ordered on his march, to join, ſoon as poſſible, the army of General Beaulieu.

It appears decided, that the Arch-Duke Charles will follow the plans of the Marſhall Clairfait, in the preſent campaign; and it is ſaid that the Auſtrian forces being much more conſiderable than they were laſt year, the conſequences muſt be advantageous.—The reports of peace are conſiderably relaxed.

June 22.

The reports of peace ſo generally ſpread, and even mentioned in the council itſelf, have all of a ſudden ceaſed. Were they without foundation? We think they were not; we perſiſt in believing that there has been an armiſtice for ſeveral days paſt in agitation; that a courier came to aſk it in the name of the emperor; that the directory have deliberated upon it; but that they will not liſten to any preliminary conditions; except Mayence and Manheim, the keys of Germany are given into their hands, leſt the definitive negociations ſhall not be agreeable to their wiſhes. Whatever were the condition demanded of the emperor, we are perſuaded he will not fail to repent of his having refuſed them. The reaſon of it is ſimple; his army is diſpirited; every day announces him a freſh misfortune. The enthuſiaſm of victory is amongſt our troops; it multiplies an hundred fold their ſtrength, and we are promiſed prodigies of ſucceſs.

The famous de Latang, denounced as the chief of the counter revolutionary movements which have agitated many parts of the South, has been judged at Avignon, and ſhot on the 24 h Prairial.

The general quarters of the army of the Sambre and the Meuſe are at preſent at Neuwied, it has been moved to this place ſince Jourdan has paſſed the Rhine with his army in four ſtrong columns.

The fortreſs of Ehrenbreitſtein is ſurrounded, but at a diſtance, and out of the reach of cannon. The Auſtrians have ſome troops encamped under the cannon of the place. The garriſon is about 3000 men ſtrong; it is compoſed of the regiment of Mauricaini, and of ſome detachments, of chaſſeurs, with ſome of the troops of the empire. Ehrenbreitſtein is one of the moſt impregnable fortreſſes of Europe. It is hewn out of a rock; its fortifications are cannon and bombproof, riſing to a peak of prodigious height. The ſiege will certainly be long and murderous.

3d Meſſidor (June 22)

The laſt military events on the Rhine have not been ſo ſucceſsful and happy as thoſe which preceded them, at leaſt the ſucceſs has been divided, as the following pieces which are official, will ſhew:

ARMY of the RHINE and MOSELLE.

"Head Quarters, Neuſtadt, 27 Prarial (June 15)

"By my letter of the 25 h of this month I made known to you my intention of attacking General Wurmſer, between Frankenthal and the Rebut; his front was covered by a ſwampy canal, and his left by the Rebach. The enemy had augmented the force of this excellent poſition, by baſtionades all along the river which was inundated to about 250 or 200 fathoms.

"The bravery of the army and the good conduct of the chiefs and the general officers vanquiſhed in a ſhort time all theſe nearly inſurmountable obſtacles. The troops up to the armpits in water, and under the ſharpeſt fire of artillery and muſquetry, charged the enemy with the greateſt courage, and carried all the works which defended their inundations. All who were not killed in the entrenchments, were taken in the greateſt diſorder.

"The numerous cavalry of the enemy did not prevent our infantry from purſuing them through the immenſe plain which ſeparated us from Manheim, and we were obliged to conſtruct a number of bridges for the paſſage of our cavalry, and to effect the driving of the enemy into their entrenched camp.

"The paſſage was a capital manœuvre of cavalry and light artillery, and we chaſed them from poſition to poſition, until we came under the fire of Manheim. We have occupied in the evening the poſitions which the enemy had left.

"The loſs of the enemy is very conſiderable in killed and wounded: I reckon the number not leſs than 6 or 700 men. The time neceſſary for conſtructing bridges for the paſſage of our cavalry, preventing us from making a great number of priſoners.

"The centre of the army under the orders of General Deſſaix, has attacked the Rehnt, and Neuhoſen, Holhof, Dauverſtadt, and the woods of Shfferſtadt and Mutterſtadt. Theſe attacks was directed by Generals Delmas and Beaupuy. The left wing under the orders of Gen. S. Cyr, has attacked Holzhof, and would attack Frankenthal; it was directed by the Gen. of diviſion Duhem.

"I cannot paſs too great eulogies on the bravery of the whole army, and on the talents of the chiefs who have directed all theſe attacks; the greateſt order and the moſt exact preciſion aſſured their ſucceſs; which has met with no inſtance of the leaſt check. The chief etat-major will give you an account of the number and ſtate of the priſoners, when it ſhall be received at the head quarters. I eſtimate them at 150 or 200 men.

(Signed) BARNADATTE.

It is not only the courage and talents of Buonaparte, but more particularly his name, which contains the letter R, terrifies the people of Rome. This wants to be explained.

A much revered prophet of that country has announced ſeveral centuries ago, that Italy would not be ſubdued, except by a General who had but one R in his name;—that reſiſtance againſt ſuch a one would be vain; that Rome would open its gates to him; and that the powers of the Pope would from that time be at an end. The Romans pretend, that the prophet in queſtion, has never deceived them; that all his oracles were hitherto found true. In confirmation of this, they cite ſeveral proofs.—It was obſerved that from the commencement of the war, they were perſuaded that Kellerman, one day, would ſet the tri coloured flag on the top of the Capitol, becauſe his name contained the fatal letter.

It is more than probable, that the honor of verifying the prophecy is reſerved for Buonaparte, yet it muſt be allowed, that with armies like ours, Generals with or without an R, poſſeſs powerful means to recover the active country of Cicero and Brutus to Philoſophy and liberty.

LONDON, June 28.

A very ſingular and alarming circumſtance has tr pired, within the laſt few days, which we deem it our to communicate to the public: Three foreigners hav reſided for ſome time paſt at a place on the Eaſtern c The facts which follow will ſhew the propriety of nei mentioning their names, nor that of the place of thei fidence. They had been employed in ſounding, tak plans, &c. in various parts of the coaſt, under pretenc amuſement. They were utterly unſuſpected by the in bitants, till the incautious preſent of a very large ſum money to the man with whom they lodged, awak ſuſpicions that their wealth was greater, and their def more important than they appeared to be. Informa of their myſterious character and employment was im diately tranſmitted to government. Warrants were iſ to apprehend them. Two eſcaped, and one was tak but ſuch was the importance of the diſcoveries exto from him, that the particulars of his ſeizure and exam tion have been carefully kept from the public. It is from our wiſh to impede any meaſures of Governm for protecting the country againſt foreign enemies: have therefore carefully ſuppreſſed every particular wh has reached us, the diſcloſure of which might have tendency.

It is ſaid that the negociation broke off on the foll ing point: The Prince conſented to the diſmiſſion f his houſehold of all the parties whoſe conduct has gi offence to her Royal Highneſs, but inſiſted that t ſhould be received as viſitors at Carleton-Houſe. this the Princeſs, by the advice of the King poſitively fuſed her aſſent. The capture of the city of Trent cannot fail to ſpr terror from one end of the Auſtrian dominions to the ther. It will alſo contribute a conſiderable ſhare to reſtoration of the French Finances. "Gen Abercrombie ſailed for England in the Arethuſa frigate, but reports ſay, on his ſloping at Dominique, he received orders by a Packet from England, which had juſt arrived there, to remain on his ſtation; and he is expected to return back to morrow. They are hanging white people at Grenada, from 14 to 29 per day, who were concerned in Fidion's rebellious army—Some Engliſhmen are among them, but they are principally Frenchmen of great fortunes.

From Savannah Aug 5. The yellow fever has commenced its malignancy on the unfortunate citizens, of that place. In conſequence, the City Council has ordered all veſſels from Charleſton, to perform quarantine

[☞ We have ſeen a letter from Charleſton dated the 9th which mentions, that the ſickneſs there though bad was not ſo fatal as had been repreſented. Strangers, and perſons expoſed to the ſun, and air, were the moſt numerous victims.]

MARRIED]—At Charleſton (S. C.) Mr. ALEXANDER PLACIDE, to Miſs CHARLOTTE SOPHIA WRIGHTEN, of the Theatre.

From a New York Paper of Saturday laſt

By the Mary, Capt. Logan, in 45 days from Cork, we have received a Cork Paper, of July 4 containing the following London Accounts to the 28th June—five days later than our former advices:—

LONDON, June 27.

Yeſterday two Engliſh officers, accompanying a French officer from one of the out-ports, where he had landed, arrived at Mr. Dundas's office. It is reported that they bring intelligence of a pleaſant nature, but the purport is not ſuffered to tranſpire.

June 28.

The Prince of Wales came yeſterday to Carleton-houſe, and a reconciliation took place between him and the Princeſs. They dined together with a ſelect party. The new arrangement of the houſhold will take place immediately. Lady Jerſey reſigns her ſituation as miſtreſs of the Robes, and will pay her reſpects to their Majeſties the firſt court day after. Their Royal Highneſſes will go to the drawing room on Thurſday, and there will be a ſeries of feſtes given by the principal nobility on the happy occaſion.

Orders have been ſent to Brighthelmſtone for the Marine Pavilion to be got ready for the ſummer reſidence of the Prince and Princeſs of Wales and their infant daughter.

NAPLES, May 21.

The Prince of Belmonte, who had been ſent to Genoa, to confer with the French Envoy, Faypoult, to learn the diſpoſition of the French government, relative to a peace with Naples, is returned; after which a grand council of ſtate was held, in the preſence of the King, the Queen, and the prime miniſter Action, at which the propoſition of a negociation with France was rejected, and it was reſolved to continue the war with the utmoſt rigour,

Every preparation is therefore making for the defence of the country, and 40,000 men are immediately to be raiſed in Naples and Sicily, to be added to the 20,000 we already have. The nobility and clergy have been required to contribute to the utmoſt of their power to the defence of the kingdom.

FRANCKFORT, June 11.

The very aſtoniſhing activity of the indefatigible enemy, and their rigid progreſs towards the heart of this country, have placed his Royal Highneſs the Commander in Chief, under the imperious neceſſity of altering the plan ſent to him by the Council of war of Vienna, on account of the alarming ſituation of this great city, and the evident intention of the French, at once to make themſelves maſters of it, to inveſt Mayence, and by taking poſſeſſion of Aſchaffenbourgh, to cut off all ſupplies from the Auſtrian army, which chiefly receives them through the medium of the river Mayn.

The Archduke has been obliged to attempt a retreat, which he has effected in the moſt diſtinguiſhed and honorable manner, having, at every point, worſted an enemy that were more than commonly active in harraſſing the Imperial and Royal army; with the firm perſuaſion not only of ſecuring Franckfort, Mayence, and Aſchaffenbourg, but of driving the enemy in every direction before him, did his Royal Highneſs paſs the Rhine; and by forced marches, a formidable column of his army reached on Friday morning, the environs of Weſtlaer, Limbourg and Dillenbourg; as the Auſtrians advanced, the enemy retreated, and none of them were to be ſeen in that neighbourhood at ſunſet; cheering hope, has of courſe, reſumed the place of fear in this and the adjacent country.

Yeſterday an uninterrupted cannonade was heard from a great diſtance; but no particulars have as yet reached Franckfort relative to its object, though the well informed pretend, that the defeat of the enemy was the conſequence.

HAGUE, June 11.

The great queſtion which has been ſo frequently debated in the Convention, viz. whether the National Convention ſhall have the entire diſpoſal of the armed citizens, and the finances of the whole republic; was determined in the ſitting of laſt Tueſday, by the majority of a ſingle vote. The decree only ſays, that all further debate on the ſubject ſhall ceaſe; but this may certainly be conſidered as a rejection of the propoſition.

THEATRE.

NEWPORT.

On Wedneſday Evening, Auguſt 31, 1796,

Will be preſented, (Never performed here but once)

That favourite COMEDY, Call'd,

SUCH THINGS ARE,

OR, THE

Philanthropiſt of the World.

This excellent Comedy is the Production of the celebrated Mrs. Inchbald, highly diſtinguiſhed by the Literati for many of the moſt pleaſing and inſtructive dramatic Pieces exhibited on the Stage. The Choice and Ingenuity of the Plan and Plot of "SUCH THINGS ARE," are not only truly intereſting, but equally diverting.—The Utile et Dulce are ſo peculiarly and happily blended, that every Auditor muſt ingenuouſly confeſs as well as feel their powerful and pleaſing Effect. The Characters of this Piece are admirably contraſted: The Comic are highly animated; whilſt thoſe of a ſerious Nature are forcibly penetrative on the feeling Boſom of Senſibility. The uncommon Succeſs this Play has been honoured with by crowded and liberal Audiences in Boſton, New-York, Philadelphia, Charleſton, and the principal Theatres in Europe, &c. is a greater Panegyric than poſſibly can be paid to its Merit, within the few Lines here preſented to the Public: The Philanthropy which breathes through this Production, is a Leſſon and Admonition to every Chriſtian and Fellow Citizen. The Authoreſs has delineated the Character of the amiable Mr. Howard [whoſe Life was continually employed to wiping the Tear from the Eye of Diſtreſs] in ſuch glowing Colours, that "SUCH THINGS ARE," will remain a more valuable and laſting Monument to his Memory than any Statue his Country could erect, to immortalize that great and worthy Man.

Extracts from the Preface of the French Tranſlator.

THE Title of this Work will, perhaps, give ſome Alarm to delicate Ears:—The Word "SOLITUDE" may inſpire melancholy and unfavourable Ideas; it is, however, only neceſſary to read a few Pages, to be undeceived. The Author is not one of thoſe extravagant Miſanthropes, who would compel Mankind, born for Society, and connected with it by a Variety of indiſſoluble Ties, to retire into Foreſts, to inhabit Dens and Caves, and to live only with wild Beaſts; he is a Friend to Humanity, a ſenſible and virtuous Individual, an honeſt Citizen, who endeavours to enlighten the Minds of his Fellow Creatures, upon a Subject the moſt intereſting to them,—the Attainment of HAPPINESS.

☞ Subſcriptions for the above Book, are taken in by THOMAS RUMREILL, Eſq; in Thames-Street, and the Printer hereof.

Newport, Auguſt 1, 1796.

From a LONDON PAPER.

Mr. Page a gallant Bachelor, picked up a young Lady's glove last week in a garden at Bath, which he restored with the following temporary effusion.

IF but from Glove you take the letter G,
Then Glove is Love, which I devote to thee.

Upon which the young Lady immediately replied—
And if from Page you take the letter P,
Then Page is Age—and that wont do for me.

EPITAPH By a learned Common Councilman, designed for the present chief magistrate of the metropolis of London.
HERE lies WILLIAM CURTIS, our late jolly Lord Mayor,
Who has left this here world, and is gone to that there.

ANECDOTE.

TWO porters happening to meet in Dame-street, Bob Jin, one says to the other, "Mac Shane, how are you, my dear creature?"—"Why, upon my soul, I hardly know, but pretty tightish, as the times go." "Pray, have you seen our old friend Pat Murphy, lately?" "No, by J—s (replies he) and I am very much afraid I shall never see him again." "How so?" "Why, he has met, with a very unfortunate accident lately." What the devil was it? inquires Mac Shane—"Nothing more than this, my dear; as he was standing on a plank, talking devoutly to a priest, at a place in London, which I think they call the Old Bailey, the plank suddenly gave way, and, by the L—, Murphy got his neck broke!"
